

No Answer

by John Agard

Once the seals had skins
shiny wet as a new anorak.

Now their skins have a rusty look of an old car part.
The star has fallen out of their eye.

The seals have no answer
to the question
of poisonous waste.

O Laughter
walk on water
that the seals may smile again.

